MILPARK'S L&D NEWSLETTER

EDITION 4: OCTOBER 2023

Hello again from Milpark,

What is leadership in a multicultural world and how does digital transformation affect it? These are just two of the questions we are asking ourselves at Milpark, as we seek to enhance people's ability to lead in organisations (such as yours). We believe leadership is a quality, not a skill, and is influenced by more than mere position or paygrade.

Chief Commercial Officer,
Milpark Education

The new Director of Milpark's Business School, Segran Nair, shared with me what he believes are critical markers for leadership development right now. You can read our full conversation, as well as his reflections on his first 100 days 'in office', below.

I hope this edition gives inspires both you and your team. We really do want to hear how you define and support leadership journeys. If you have a particular L&D question for us, please drop us an email or submit it online (you'll find the button below).

Yours in education,

Leigh-Ann

On leadership development from new Milpark Business School director

Leadership has never been more challenged by the pace of change than today – or so we think. But there have, of course, been other significant industrial and technological 'revolutions' in the past. The difference today is the speed at which change happens. In a world of rapidly advancing technologies, disruptive innovation and sustainability imperatives, how can we equip people to lead high-performing teams and drive long-term success? Here Leigh-Ann Hayward and Segran Nair speak about developments in leadership training, both at Milpark and out in the wider world. Read.

Q&A

Which Milpark programmes are accredited and which are not?

– Tasneem, Johannesburg

Answer: At Milpark, our degrees are validated through national South African Qualifications Authority (SAQA) standards at NQF levels 5 to 10. We provide specific details in the programme descriptions on our website. It's also important to note that Milpark's CTA holds SAICA accreditation, while our MBA is AMBA-accredited, making it the only African online programme in this esteemed league. While short courses are not typically accredited, we have the ability to shape custom and co-created L&D programmes around certified degrees and certificates. With decades of experience as a registered private higher education provider, Milpark has established a solid reputation in the sector.
